

Though I am able to divide my work into sub-media categories, the process by which I create is not a fragmented spreading thin. Instead, each medium (writing, composing, and the visual arts) is a tool to appropriately convey inspiration to the chosen/circumstantial audience. Often they work in union with one another, or one will inspire another, or one will inform the other; for example, I will begin a musical composition for dance by first writing the prompts and outline to a story.

Writing

Television screen writing, short novels, short stories, plays, ballets, creative non-fiction, and poems; the stories are ridiculous, romantic, intangible, however simple and honest.
